United States Of America,) Plaintiff,) vs.)
 David Andrew Diehl,) Defendant)

Case No A-10-CR-297(01)-LV

Emergency Temporary Injunction

Now comes Defendant, David a. Diehl, pro-se in the above numbered cause and requests that the court order the BOP to remove the entire lockdown of my comisary account.

On September 11th, the United States Attorney caused the deduction of 1600 dollars from my available spending which represents the entire balance. As a result I can no longer purchase printer ribbons, paper, copy cards, stamps, soap, toothpaste ect. I am also pro-se on direct appeal with the Supreme Court, and have several other suits ongoing. This outrageous act seems to have been caused by an inquiry concerning the United States Attorneys role in causing my home to be foreclosed on, but at that this point that is still speculation.

I, like all other prisoners pay my fines through the FRP program. I have always made those payments, I actually pay more than is required by law.

The Federal Debt Collection Procedure Act referred to on page 2 of the governments brief is not a tool to superceed the FRP program.

The net effect of the United States actions is to shift my personal expenses to the BOP, and to hinder my ability to litigate my criminal case - which I call an outrageous example of corruption. See Motion to Investigate Corruption filed with Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Therfor, I pray this court will order the BOP to immediately remove the financial restraints on my account. I in turn will not transfer any amount of money out of my account without permission until this issue is fully litigated because unless this action is being taken against other defendants it is a violation of my equal rights under the law.

Respectfully,

David Diehl
